On The Road

Travels to Pennsylvania, New York, the United Kingdom, and Boston with hopes to show the power of the I Ching dampened by the flu after our first session in PA. Such is the nature of yin-yang.

As I recovered, I was lucky to capture some snippets of nature which will be incorporated in the upcoming youtube video - the idea of the Dao.

iChing.Wiki presents what I am still learning and what I did learn in my research for a book titled, I Ching of a Thousand Doors. Check out my author's website: <https://www.jamesrolsen.com>

The purpose of building iChing.Wiki is to encourage people to live a spiritual life. While the I Ching gives practical advice, it can aid you on your spiritual path.

*The sun visits a bit longer.
As Winter's Yin gives way,
To Yang's sunlit ray.
Fields grow and flower.*

Science as Observation

As we see, hear, smell, feel, and taste the world, we try to make sense of it, contemplating the patterns and cycles of it. Seeing the sun rise and fall, the seasons repeat from year to year, we create a mental model of these patterns, using them to make sense of what we observe. This is science.

When we express these patterns in mathematics, even going so far as to claim cause and effect, it is still science - a science that is remains rooted in observation.

When we use tools to enhance our powers of observation, to observe the small and far away, to measure the spectrum of the light we see, to detect radio waves in the ether, it is still science, science rooted in observation.

 Science taking what we observe, making a mental model fits the patterns of we observe, and using that mental model to predict what we will observe in the future.

The Finite and the Infinite

The question many ask is how the finite mind can relate the an infinite fount of knowledge embedding the the Universe, or maybe even a mind which lies outside the universe. There are many, many traditions for answering this question. Most get to the idea that language itself is limiting, so that the answer must be beyond language. Meditation, magic, mystical, and metaphysical are words used to describe this search. One of the ways to use the I Ching, is from the approach of mysticism, Daoist and other traditions.
